“All labor has dignity”.
BY : Martin Luther King, Jr.

Honey, scholar and former civil rights organizer, offers a collection of 15 of King's speeches (12 previously unpublished) on workers' rights. This collection of King's speeches remind readers that his campaign for civil rights was as much about economic justice as desegregation. Editor Honey includes prepared formal lectures by King as well as his extemporaneous "Mountaintop" speech given the night before his assassination.

Legal research exercises : following the Bluebook; a uniform system of citation.
BY : Susan T. Phillips.

This legal research exercise book helps students master efficient legal research skills through challenging in-depth problems. The 11th edition contains fifteen assignments, with all new problems. For each assignment, there are two variations using the print materials, along with one exercise using Westlaw and one exercise using LexisNexis, which is the format adopted in the 10th edition. The new edition's questions/answers follow the 19th edition of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation (2010).
Why the law is so perverse.

BY: Leo Katz.

PUBLISHER: University of Chicago Press.

Why the Law Is So Perverse, focuses on four fundamental features of our legal system, all of which seem to not make sense on some level and to demand explanation.

- First, legal decisions are essentially made in an either/or fashion—guilty or not guilty, liable or not liable, either it’s a contract or it’s not—but reality is rarely as clear-cut.
- Second, the law is full of loopholes. No one seems to like them, but somehow they cannot be made to disappear.
- Third, legal systems are loath to punish certain kinds of highly immoral conduct while prosecuting other far less pernicious behaviors.
- Fourth, why does the law often prohibit what are sometimes called win-win transactions, such as organ sales or surrogacy contracts?

In 1960 the New York Times published an advertisement accusing Alabama officials of willfully abusing civil rights activists. Montgomery police commissioner Lester Sullivan filed suit for defamation. Alabama courts, citing factual errors in the ad, ordered the Times to pay .5 million $$ in damages. The Times appealed to the Supreme Court, which had previously deferred to the states on libel issues. The justices unanimously sided with the Times, recognizing that Alabama’s application of libel law threatened both the nation’s free press and equal rights. This 1964 decision by the SC forever altered defamation law.

Restorative justice: healing the foundations of our everyday lives.

BY: Dennis Sullivan

PUBLISHER: Willow Tree Press

The authors, through examples, explore and explain ways for individuals, communities, nations to reorganize their lives and create new ways of relating to better meet the needs of victims of crime. Beyond punishment through the criminal justice system, the idea of reconciliation, restitution, and rebuilding lives on all levels is examined. Beyond punishment of the criminal justice system, lies the ideal of healing the psychological wounds crime inflicts on victims.
