Fred Hatmaker

of the Scriptures made him qualified to speak at different churches of various denominations. Still, Fred was quite shy until the freshman year of high school when his height jumped from 5 ft. 6 ft. "Overnite." That made Fred desirable by basketball and baseball coaches.

Besides helping him get two All-State awards, Fred’s height made him very popular socially; which is why he got President of the Beta Club, Student Council, Senior Class, and Library Club. In his Senior year of high school, Fred received "Mr. Popularity." Even though he had helped, his knowledge capacity proved equally important by stacking up a few awards of its own, such as Valedictorian of both his High School and Elementary School graduating class. In 1967, Fred made College Who’s Who. He was initiated in Pi Omega Pi (an honorary business fraternity).

The initiation was close to Christmas and near the end of the fall semester. Since he "always wanted to be different," Fred played a classical piece and numerous popular requests on the organ, which is a favorite pastime.

Fred’s other hobbies range from the Stock Market, building race cars and playing piano to sports and fooling around on his dairy farm, "When my nose isn’t in a book." He builds both dragsters and stock cars. Fred likes competition so he likes all sports, though golf is his least favorite. As far as the farm is concerned, he lives there so he likes doing chores and taking care of the Angus and Herefords. Those are two kinds of dairy cattle.

About life’s many decisions, Fred follows a simple, yet thoughtful saying which is, "Do what’s best, not what you want." That explains much, if not all, of his actions. Something else that Fred likes to do is to keep three things going at once.

Besides being known for teaching various subjects at Spencianer, Fred is known for helping start the Student Government Association. Oh yeah, the various subjects he teaches are Tax, Advanced Accounting, Investment, Insurance, Banking, and Office Management.

Weber Represents Nations Business Schools
At Washington Office of Education Meeting

On November 15, Spencianer College’s Executive Director, Harry V. Weber, represented the Association of Independent Colleges and Schools at a meeting held at the U.S. Office of Education in Washington, D.C.

Attending the meeting were twelve leaders in student financial aid from the nation’s colleges, universities, and business schools. Mr. Weber represented the over four hundred accredited business schools in the nation.

The one day meeting was held to discuss operational procedures and guidelines for The Basic Educational Opportunity Grants Program, and how to best serve students with these grants. Discussions were also held to review the family contribution schedule for the BEOG program in 1974-75.

The meetings were conducted by Peter Muihrad, Deputy Commissioner for Higher Education, and Peter K. V. Voight, Acting Director of the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants Program.

Losing Is Fun

Cassadia is minus fifteen unwanted pounds. Terry admits, "Those big numbers on the scale scared me."

Terry’s reason is only one of many the students had for starting the program, such as health, the high cost and limited style selection of large-size clothes, and also the reluctance of employers to hire the overweight.

In addition to the obvious rewards enjoyed by successful weight watchers, there are various incidental benefits. One student says that she has acquired a taste for foods she had thought she disliked. Another was so enthusiastic about the program that her mother decided to try it too.

The cost of joining Weight Watchers is small when you consider how much one spends on snacks and sweets. The fee is $5.00 to join and $2.00 for each week.

If you are interested in joining the "unstuffed generation" be in the second floor corridor on Monday at lunch hour and take the first step to a new you.
