Sullivan’s Fort Knox students benefit from many library services

In the past, library users had to be in the library to take advantage of the services it offered, but things have definitely changed. In addition to the wonderful resources of the Barr Memorial Library located on Fort Knox, Sullivan students can enjoy many of the benefits from the Sullivan University library in the comfort of their own home. They can also use the libraries at other Louisville campuses in the Sullivan University System, which encompasses Sullivan University, Spencianer College and Louisville Technical Institute.

Many great off-campus benefits

From off-campus, Sullivan students can find and print articles from more than 50 databases, providing access to more than 30,000 full text journals. From off-campus, Sullivan students can find and print articles from more than 50 databases, providing access to more than 30,000 full text journals. Go to library.sullivan.edu/remoteaccesspage.htm and follow the instructions for a complete list of databases. The complete text of many articles, as well as detailed business and financial information, are all available.

Students can also contact a librarian and ask research questions. Use the form on library.sullivan.edu/askalib.htm to send an email to a staff librarian. Replies will be sent out within 48 hours.

Students can also speak to a librarian by phone. Library staff members have advised students about research, recommended books, given Turnitin advice, and helped students use the databases without ever seeing the students face-to-face. For those who prefer to work with a librarian in person, students can make an appointment to discuss research, learn to use a database, or get help with other library technologies at the campus of their choice. Students can check out items from Sullivan University, Spencianer College, or Louisville Technical Institute by using their student ID card. Access our online catalog, libdb.sullivan.edu/ from any computer with an Internet connection and see what resources each campus has to offer. Users can even put books on hold over the Internet, but call the library for instruction about this service. Books, videos and DVD’s can be checked out for two weeks, and returned to the Sullivan University, Spencianer College or Louisville Technical campuses.

FROM A STUDENT: “If I can do it, you can too!”

Dear Friends,

My name is Lori Broadway and I attend Sullivan University’s Ft. Knox Campus. Two years ago, I was working my regular eight to five dead-end job and arrived home miserable and unhappy. I called my best friend who let me vent for a while, then calmly said, “Go back to school and get your degree.” Of course, I made every excuse in the book: no extra money, bills must get paid, no extra time to study; and who will watch my four year old daughter since I am a single parent. A few weeks later, during another grape session, my friend again mentioned furthering my education. She said information is free and gave me a few scenarios about a better life which I definitely needed. The next day on my lunch break, I drove to a local college near me and tried to register for classes. The experience was discouraging because of the unnecessary fees, the unwillingness to help with my career plan, and lack of concern about my previous credits from another college experience.

I was going to give up, until I ran into a woman whose daughter attended my daughter’s school. She encouraged me to try Sullivan University where she currently attended. She stated that I would still have time to register for spring classes which began on March 28, 2006. I thought “no way” since today’s date was the 21st of March. But, I did make the cut-off time and I began life as a full-time student in the Administrative Office Management degree program.

Today I have been fortunate enough to adorn Sullivan’s Dean’s List several times, quit my dead-end job, and established my own successful screenprint and embroidery business. It is amazing that a year ago I took a Business Organization & Management class and later opened my own business. I own Lori’s Apparel & More. The class taught me what not to do and what skills were important to learn. Ironically, Accounting, Spreadsheet Application, Desktop Publishing, College English, Information Literacy, Professional Development; and the other classes I have taken, all have played a valuable role in the daily implementation of my business. My ultimate goal is to finish my degree and walk down the aisle in my cap and gown, not once, but several times. Always have a dream and please do not give up. Follow your dreams. Plan for the future then implement and execute your plan and dreams because if a broke single mom can do it, so can you! I am cheering for you!

Sincerely your friend from Sullivan,

Lori Broadway
