Career Fair draws record numbers

Sullivan students had their resumes handy when they attended the on-campus Career Fair. Twice a year Sullivan University-Lexington holds Career Fairs, designed to give students an exclusive opportunity to market themselves to local employers. Students from Sullivan’s Professional Development class (designed to assist students in fine-tuning skills to aid them in their professional pursuit) assisted in coordinating the event.

Over 300 students attended the recent Career Fair.

Thank you to all of the great companies who gave of their time and energy to participate including the FBI, New Age Technologies, First Investors Corporation, Toyota Child Development Center, NPC International/Pizza Hut and Ashwood Travel.

Career Fairs are great opportunities for students

“Sullivan’s Career Fairs are really good because they get our names out into the workforce. In addition, the Fairs provide students an opportunity to talk with area employers and get insight to career moves,” said Tricia Hatton, Professional Development student. “It was good for the class because we were able to work as a team to pull the event together.”

“I thought the Career Fair was very informative, professional and interesting,” agreed student Carmen White. “The GES department did a wonderful job making this a great success!”

Attending companies gave rave reviews!

“We had a wonderful response from the students. They seemed to be genuinely interested in the positions that we had available,” stated Norma M. Dobson, FBI. “The students were really respectful to us! The set up was great!” said John Szabo, United States Army.
